Secretary of Board of Education and City Attorney Hold Different Opinions.

BOND ISSUE MIGHT BE RENDERED VOID

City Attorney Believes Intent of Law is to Allow Women Ballot Only in Matter of Electing the School Board.

Secretary J. F. Burgess of the Board of Education maintains that women have a right to vote on school bend proposition and bases his opinion on a ruling of the state superintendent of education to that The law provides that the state superintendent shall be authority on all school matters which are not made clear in the code, but City Attorney W. J. Connell insists that the law is sufficiently clear on this point and the intervention of the state superintendent is not necessary.

"If women are allowed to vote on the High school bonds I have no doubt but that eastern bond companies will question the validity of the issue," said Mr. Connell. "No ruling of the state superintendent can stand against the specific provisions of the code, and if the board desires to issue and dispose of the bonds without delay women should not be allowed to vote.

"The section of the school law which relates to the powers of boards of education be secured only by submitting propositions to electors. The word 'electors' has been held by many authorities to mean both men in this instance it refers only to male voters; him away from home nights. In subdivision No. 17 of the code it is plainly stated that women may vote in any proposition other than the election of

Persons who believe that this section extends the ballor to women on all educational matters hold that the statement that women shall vote in elections where members of the board are to be elected cannot be said to mean that they may vote only it to mean that women shall exercise the ballot in all school matters because it does not forbid their voting on other propositions. Mr. Connell holds, on the other hand, that the absence of any statement as to the power of women to vote for bonds cannot be construed to mean a grant of

B. F. Thomas, president of the Board of Education, shares the opinion of Mr. Connell and says that he thinks the validity of the bonds might be endangered in case women are allowed to vote on them. Among the other members of the board there is a variety of opinion on the question.

When the question of issuing school bonds was submitted in 1898 there was some controversy concerning the right of women to vote on the proposition and J. M. Gillan, who was secretary of the Board of Education at that time, wrote to State Superintendent William R. Jackson at Lincoln and received the following reply, dated October

Tales of the Insurance Man

The meaning of "Horse Sense"

One month ago, writes H. I. Swineford in The Equiable News, a man in Fauquier County, Va., applied for a $2,000 policy in the Equitable. This application was made a few weeks after the applicant, while fox hunting, fell into an old well. His horse was killed; he escaped with a few bruises. It was simply the difference of which reached the bottom of the well first; as it happened the horse did.

Just prior to this incident a horse kicked a man who lives in Nebraska, and made him keep his policy in force. Now a horse is the cause of a man's taking out a policy. At last we understand the meaning of "horse sense."

These little incidents come up every day; all you need is a jar to make you think. When you get to that point you'll want insurance-and you'll want the best. That's the only kind we write in the Equitable. Our Gold Debenture Endowment policies just about fill the bill for protection or as an investment. Better talk it over now and be on the safe side.
